Who is Luther? What is a Lutheran? What is the big deal about Lent?

"Jesus Christ is Risen today! Our triumphant Holy Day!"

wonder what it was like that first day, that day when Jesus rose from the dead. I know what it is like today. It is a day of celebration, of special music, a great deal of singing, new dresses and suits, breakfasts and flowers, excitement and expectation, baskets and gifts and traditions. We have a sense of what Easter is, and what it isn't. "If we don't do this, it just isn't Easter!" The "this" might be going to grandmom's, or getting a new hat, or opening our baskets before we go to church, or any number of things. We have all sorts of thoughts and ideas of what makes Easter day Easter.

Back on that day of Resurrection, though, there were no expectations. There were no bands or orchestras, no crowds of people going to worship, no choirs and special anthems, no new hats, no special dinners at grandmom's, and certainly no baskets full of candy and eggs. On that day I presume things were rather quiet. I don't know what sort of noise might have gone with opening the tomb, or if the earthquake was large or relatively modest. The women coming to the tomb were weeping, not celebrating. The garden was not full of people, but nearly empty. Resurrection day at this time was not yet "Easter."

And yet, in this quiet time, with no one expecting it (even though Jesus described what was coming to his disciples), God was doing a powerful new thing. God was bringing life from death. God was creating a path through the wilderness of sin and loss. God was opening the Kingdom of Heaven for those who could not see what Jesus was doing on that day.

As we prepare to celebrate this mighty act of God, let us remember Easter is not about us, or our traditions. It is not what we do that makes this day what it is. It is what God has done in Jesus that makes this Resurrection Day. For without the resurrection, all we celebrate would be nothing. Eggs and candy, hats and hymns, dinners and family do not save us from the power of death. But Jesus' resurrection does. And this deserves all the fanfare and bands and worship and joy and excitement and expectation we can bring – not to this day, but to him, to Jesus, who, for our salvation, is risen from the dead.

Whatever it was like on that first day, that day when Jesus rose from the dead, I trust we can find ways to mark it now with celebration. Jesus is risen. Jesus continues to be with us and for us. Jesus calls us from darkness to light, from death to life. Let us not miss this because of our traditions, but let the story of Resurrection act within us, and impact all we do as we live with Jesus.

The Vicar's View:

Easter and the Importance of Reading to the End of the Story ne of my favorite books growing up was The Lion, the Witch, and the Wardrobe. I remember how hard I cried when I read it for the first time and realized that Aslan had decided to sacrifice himself on the Stone Table so that Edmund would live. I was inconsolable that night, knowing that the king of Narnia was dying like this. Knowing that, while Edmund would no longer be in the clutches of the White Witch, she had ultimately won. It would only be a matter of time before winter again fell over the whole of Narnia. It got to the point where I tossed the book in the corner of my bedroom, determined not to read the rest of it. But a voice in my head reminded me that the story wasn't finished. Later that night, I grabbed the book and read it till the end. It was well worth it. Within about thirty minutes, I went from feeling miserable and hopeless to feeling the kind of excitement and joy that sticks in your memory twenty years later. Aslan was alive; he was even stronger than before. As in most great stories, good wins over evil. After years of winter, Narnia was at peace, ruled by the just and wise main characters of the book.

How different would my experience with the book have been if I had kept crying and left it in the corner of my bedroom? Perhaps a friend of mine would have told me the true ending a few years later. But the rush of positive feelings I had, and that sense of being inside the story with the characters as they realized that Aslan wasn't dead, would have been gone. I suspect C. S. Lewis wouldn't have become one of my favorite authors. When I was fourteen and started to read his non-fiction books, I discovered that much of The Lion, the Witch, and the Wardrobe was a Christian allegory, with Aslan representing God/Jesus and the White Witch representing evil/Satan. What would happen if we were to reach Jesus' death on the cross, the sacrifice that he made for our sins, and close our Bibles there? We miss the victory of God. Evil wins, and "Good Friday" is no longer so good, since Jesus dies and stays dead.

Although most Christians wouldn't literally close their Bibles at the death of Jesus, I think there's a danger of forgetting about Easter once it passes. The resurrection belongs at the forefront of our Christian beliefs and worldview, not at its periphery. By the end of this month, Easter morning will have come and gone. But as Christians we should be celebrating it every day of our lives. Jesus' resurrection is the source of our consolation and our joy, and the basis of our hope for eternal life. It is a hope that was lovingly promised to us on a Sunday morning that changed the course of world history and continues to transform and renew us, day by day.

Wednesday Bible Study

In many editions of Bibles, there's an entire group of books that come in between the Old and New Testaments. They're called the Apocrypha. Have you ever been curious about what they are, why they're not in all Bibles, and what some of the books are like? Starting April 19th, we will look at what the Apocrypha are and how they have been used in Christianity. We will then plunge into what may be the most interesting and fun book out of them: Tobit.

Classes will be at 7:00 a.m. in the library and noon in the parlor, and will be facilitated by Vicar Dan.

Living Voice of the Gospel: 500 Years of Lutheran Song

n March, Reformation Lutheran Church in Media hosted a seminar led by Dr. Mchael Krentz, Director of Music Ministries and Lecturer at The Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia. Attendees from our congregation included Jeff Wesley, Joy Grace, Vicar Dan, and Pat McHugh. It was an interesting field trip through our Lutheran hymnal as we learned about the origins of many hymns written by Martin Luther and others – why they were written, how they reflect what was going on at that time, and how they were used. The earliest hymns were simple lines of music written to be sung by a small group unaccompanied in someone's home during an evening meeting. Early hymns were written and sung as a way to teach and to communicate through song in a way that people might find easier to learn and remember – everything from the Christmas story to the Lord's Prayer to the current events of the day. No way did we cover 500 years; we barely scratched the surface. It was an enjoyable day and I for one have added some hymns to my list of favorites, particularly as I learned the stories behind them.

Social Ministry

The Social Ministry Committee will be assembling breakfast bags for the elderly population that utilizes the Loaves and Fishes Food Pantry at our May meeting. In early April, there will be a bulletin board set up with suggested items that we could use if you wish to contribute to this worthwhile project. Items needed will include hot chocolate packets, tea bags, coffee bags, sugar and sugar substitute packets, juice boxes, oatmeal packets, individual cereal boxes, cereal bars, fruit cups, boxes of raisins, etc.

There will be a bin in the hallway for your donations. Thank you!

Children's Corner Dear Children,

s part of my daily exercise routine, I spend a few minutes on balance exercises. One of my activities is standing on one leg for a certain length of time. As I carry out this part of my fitness program, I stand facing a mirror which reflects a cross which is up on the wall pretty high. One way of keeping my balance is to keep my eyes focused on objects of height—like exit signs, etc. What better way of keeping one's balance (in all ways) is there than keeping your eyes "on the cross"? Every morning, I say to myself--"Keep your eyes on the cross and you won't fall." This does help me to stand erect and walk safely—but how can it help in our lives as Christians?

God sent His only son to suffer and die for us so we could be free from sin—what a great gift! God not only loves us and shows us mercy if we make a mistake, but He wants us to be loving and merciful too. If we "keep our eye on the cross," we should think of ways to ease someone else's burdens. How can you bring someone to Jesus, let them know they are loved? Have you ever seen someone who is lonely or scared—can you help in any way—a kind word, a treat, an offer of help? Do you need to forgive or be forgiven? Can you spend some quiet time with Jesus? How about a prayer for those in need?

Dear Parents,

I think today it is always a challenge to expand our Christian teachings with those outside our family circle. As Lent ends and Easter approaches, this is a great time to remind our children of God's great love for everyone. Rereading the passion of Christ and His Resurrection with your youngster might generate enthusiasm for some family projects that would connect you to Christ. A few suggestions might be praying together, setting aside a comfortable and quiet place to study scripture, spending time helping others, and eating a simple meal and giving any savings to the church. I bet that you folks can come up with many ideas.

Financial Update

n all things I have shown you that by working hard in this way we must help the weak and remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he himself said, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.' Acts 20:35

	February 2017	Year to Date
Giving/Income	$37,235.00	$79,581.10
Expenses	41,764.67	88,083.57
Plus/Minus	($4,529.67)	($8,502.47)

Summary: For the month of February we finished with a deficit of $4,529.67 while on a year-to-date basis for the first two months we finished with a deficit of $8,502.47. As we have now moved into the Lenten Season with Easter on April 16, March and April giving should hopefully be stronger in the coming months. Please continue to support Saint Matthew in all ways, including your time, treasure and talents. We are all very blessed to have a wonderful Church home at Saint Matthew.

Giving Opportunities: Saint Matthew's Evangelism Team is hosting a Fun Run event in June to forge connections with our local community and care for the hungry by collecting donations for Loaves and Fishes during the event. Will you donate $20 for a T-shirt and to help fund this great event? Just drop your donation in a pew envelope and label it for Evangelism.

Also in February as part of our annual upkeep of the church, we had all of the gutters cleaned out with the cost being over $1,000. Would you be able to make an extra donation to help defray some or all of this maintenance work?

A New Paradise

e are going to Fiji! My Mom was so excited. Dad had been posted as the new Commanding Officer of the Air Force Base at Lauthala Bay near Suva, the capital of the tropical Fiji Islands. I had never heard of this place and could not imagine why Mom was this happy. As it turned out, this was to be not only a wonderful opportunity for my Dad's career but also for unifying us as a family. No wonder Mom had this excitement.

Fiji, at the time, was a Crown Colony of Great Britain. New Zealand provided military support for air-sea rescue and transport from the main island. There were frequent visits by officials and dignitaries from New Zealand, Australia, Canada and the U.S.A. as well as the U.K. My father's duties included not only commanding the air base but also meeting with these high-ranking visitors and entertaining them together with my Mom.

Here too was a new and exotic place for a growing boy as I was soon to discover. It was also an opportunity for my little sister Janette and I to become closer and enjoy new friends and activities. We found the climate, the native plants and animals were different from home in New Zealand, and we learned quickly those creatures which were to be avoided: snakes, flying foxes, huge land crabs, sharks, barracudas, and gigantic clams on the reefs.

I remember that we stayed for a while at the Grand Pacific Hotel before moving to the new house on the air base. Mom and Dad and little Janette had a suite on the second floor which opened to the upper verandah overlooking the bay. My bed was on this verandah with its drapes of mosquito netting and I lay there at night listening to the breeze in the coconut palms and the ocean roar on the outer reef. It was so different and a long way from my uncle's farm back home, and yes, "South Pacific" the movie has scenes like these.

During our stay at the hotel I got to know the individuals of the staff who came each day to work there. Fijians, Indians and Chinese, they blended in harmony to perform their duties and they made friends with this New Zealand boy and his little sister. We had the run of the place, Janette and I, and when that happens one often encounters the unexpected. Out back from the kitchen area, there were enclosures where the ducks and hens lived. Each morning the eggs were collected and soon became breakfast in the Dining Room for the hotel guests. I remember one afternoon finding the horrifying sight of a chicken running in the yard without a head! Needless to say, I was not too keen on a revisit.

Another place that I enjoyed frequently was the sea wall which protected the garden and lawns of the hotel from the deep water of the harbor. In the sun, I would run along the wall which was flush with the grass and imagine repelling pirate invaders. On one particular day, I was running on this wall when suddenly the grass seemed to come alive and a wave of black and white banded snakes arose from sunbathing and dove over the wall into the bay. It was just like the wave created by spectators in a football stadium! There were thousands of them and my pirate adventures quickly came to a halt. I had never seen so many snakes. Back home in New Zealand there are none.

Retreating to the hotel, I invented another game which involved flying paper airplanes into the Dining Room from the second floor balcony. I had fashioned these gliders from the pages of the hotel stationery and launched them into the air above the grand staircase. There were a number of hotel guests who found airplanes at rest in their wine glasses upon sitting down to dinner. When we finally left the hotel for the new house, I'm sure there were some who breathed a great sigh of relief at the return to tranquility.

At last we were at home, and I had my own bedroom. It was a spacious one-story house with a wide verandah to shade the interior from the heat of the tropical sun. The house was raised above the sloping ground which extended toward the shoreline of the seaplane base about a half mile away. More adventures were about to begin.

Although we occupied the house, there was still some outside work to be completed, and I soon became acquainted with the workmen painting the finishing touches from their ladders. Two other homes were under construction nearby, one for Dad's Second in Command and one for the Executive Officer and their families. In looking back to that time from today, I realize my early interest in building construction began right then. Each day brought new progress as the builders continued the work and I become more and more in tune with their efforts.

A construction site by its very existence is potentially a dangerous place, especially for kids who are curious by nature. I was one of those! Each day, after the men had left, I would walk through the buildings to make my inspections and discoveries. On one occasion I ventured up into the roof space above the ceiling and in the semi-darkness suddenly made a misstep off the ceiling joists. The ceiling broke, my feet and legs went through, and there I was, shocked and hanging by my hands to a joist member. Directly beneath me was a stack of glass doors! "OK Tony, now what can you do?" I thought to myself. "If I let go from here, I'll be a goner." I could imagine blood all over the place! My Guardian Angel whispered a new thought as I was hanging there and feeling frightened. I began to swing my body back and forth and found that if I let go at the right moment, I could clear that stack of doors and land on the floor beside them. It worked! That was a life-saving discovery and a huge lesson about safety consciousness and risk of injury which remains with me to this day.

Here is the clear message: "I will be with you always"—the eternal comfort we learn from scripture. Even when we are alone and far from our homeland, we are protected by His grace.

May His peace be in our hearts.

Tony Webb

Fun Church Softball League Forming

hree area Lutheran churches will again be joining forces to form an 'ELCA' slow pitch softball team this spring and participate in a local church league.

Any able male or female over the age of 16 is welcome to join this group for fun, fellowship and a little exercise. Games will begin in May and continue though the playoff tournament in July. We will play ten regular season games during the week (never on a Fri/Sat/Sun) at ELAM near 202 in Glen Mills. We do not expect you to commit to every game, but hope you can make a majority. There will be a small fee for tee shirts (if you do not already have one) and registration to be determined by the amount of participants we get. Please spread the word about this fun opportunity--invite your friends! If you are interested in learning more or signing up, please contact Jen Troutman at jtroutman2@yahoo.com.

First Thursday Friends

irst Thursday Friends will gather on Thursday, April 6, at 11:30 a.m. at Applebee's, 320 MacDade Boulevard, Folsom. For more information contact John Stefl.

Newsletter Deadline

rticles for the May newsletter are due in the church office by noon on Friday, April 14.

It's Time to Order Easter Lilies

aster lilies that beautify our sanctuary and parlor may be ordered by signing up in the church hallway or calling the church office. Look for the sign-up sheet in the church hallway. The cost of each plant is $10.00, and it may be taken home following the 11:00 a.m. Easter service. The last day to order lilies is Sunday, April 9. Thank you.

Women of the ELCA

"Watch what God does, and then do it, like children who learn proper behavior from their parents. Mostly what God does is love you. Keep company with him and learn a life of love. Observe how Christ loved us. His love was not cautious but extravagant. He didn't love in order to get something from us but to give everything of himself to us. Love like that."

Ephesians 5:1-2 (The Message Bible)

elp us each day to live as Jesus would have us live.

April activities—Ladies, won't you join us:

April 1—LWR Quilting—Parish Ed Building at 10:30 a.m.

April 10 Regard McDonald Quilting Regler

April 19—Ronald McDonald Quilting—Parlor at 10:00 a.m.

April 23—Women's Sunday—8 a.m. and 10:15 a.m.

April 25—Sarah Circle—Parish Ed Building at 7:00 p.m.

April 26—Esther Circle—Parlor at 10:00 a.m.

On Women's Sunday, April 23, our guest speaker will be Mary DiFasco, lawyer and co-founder of Dawn's Place, which is a safe haven for both foreign-born and American women who have been victimized by Commercial Sexual Exploitation (CSE), commonly known as "sex trafficking" or slavery.

This month we will collect tote bags with drawstrings and cookies for The Welcome Church.

Christ is Risen! He is Risen Indeed!

Monthly Mailbag

Dear Saint Matthew Lutheran Church Members,

All children need to be nurtured and cared for in order to grow, learn and become healthy adults. Your generosity helps us to nurture and care for the special children who come to the Martin Luther School at Silver Springs.

Thank you for reminding the children that people do care and of the good in our communities. It is always a blessing and never taken for granted.

God bless your congregation.

Denise M. Stearns, Board Member Silver Springs-Martin Luther School Dear Saint Matthew Friends,

Thank you very much for the sweet Valentine favors for the children in the Residential Treatment Program at Silver Springs-Martin Luther School. The treats you delivered were awesome and much appreciated! You helped to bring many smiles to little faces on a dreary winter day!

We are very grateful for your kindness toward the children and faithful support of our ministry. With your support we are able to help vulnerable boys and girls in our care heal, learn, and reach for bright futures. Thank you again!
